LOCAL SAFETY PROBLEM

Unfortunately, funds are not, and are not likely to be available to run a dewalks along Court Street, from the court house to the intersection with Route 460. That would provide the ideal solution to the hazard presented automobile drivers by the large volume of pedestrian traffic on this stretch.

From sunset on, this is a dreaded drive. Dozens of men, women and children walk along this sidewalkless drive. They can't be seen in the glare of the lights of oncoming cars. To a somewhat lesser extent, the hazard exists from the Route 460 intersection all the way through the town of Appomattox.

How shall accidents be prevented on this sidewalkless area?

We can suggest but two points:

First, the automobile speed limit is twenty-five miles per hour. This should be enforced until observed.

Second, pedestrians should obey the law and walk facing oncoming cars, and go beyond that and get off the hard surface when cars are passing each other.

HOLIDAY LAKE

At Holiday Lake this section of Virginia has a recreation center of tremendous possibilities. In years to come it should lure thousands of visitors who will delight in its fishing, boating, camping and bathing. We know of no lake in the State more attractively suited to meet the pleasure requirements of inland citizens.

Perhaps we are too impatient. We are anxious for our people to enjoy this oasis as soon as possible. We realize and accept the fact that it is expedient to ban fishing at the lake this season. The lake has been stocked with fish, but it would be unwise to allow fishing this season. However, we would like to see the bathing and camping facilities placed at public disposal. We understand that a life-guard has been employed. That is the first step. The next is to open the bath house to the public use. We are told that the bath house cannot be opened until electric power is available to operate the water system. REA lines are not far distant and we do hope that ways and means will be found to open the bath house for use this summer.

GLAD TO SEE THE INTEREST

We are glad to see the very considerable public interest in the school problems in Appomattox county. The citizens are insistent that some way be found to operate the schools and the busses for a full term.

This is a healthy sign. Indifference is the greatest enemy of democracy.

Permanent solution is nearer because of this new public opinion. For several years the public school system in Virginia has been drifting toward financial rocks. Now, it is almost on financial rocks. We have expounded our own theories on this condition on many occasions. Now, the public is becoming aroused. Fortunately, there is a space of time ahead before final decisions will be made. Let that time, every minute of it, be used in seeking a practical scheme to solve the problem of local and state school finances. We have confidence that some way will yet be found to operate as usual next year.

A TOKEN ECONOMY

(From New York Times)

Senator Byrd has made the interesting proposal, which deserves study of a flat 10 per cent reduction in the next fiscal year of all Government expenditures except those for defense and interest on the public debt. Such a stop-gap economy, balancing the 10 per cent stop gap tax increase, would symbalize the willingness of various pensioners and those receiving Government wages in the higher brackets to make sacrifices to compensate those of the tax-payers. Senator Byrd proposes that the President appoint a commission of Senators, Congressmen and business men to formulate a plan for the next session of Congress to eliminate non-essential Government expenditures, provide for defense and revise the Federal tax system. Some such procedure is necessary if our serious financial problem is to be solved in an orderly and comprehensive manner.

SEND IT UNINSTRUCTED

In a few days, Democrats of Virginia will convene in Roanoke for the purpose of naming and instructing the Old Dominion delegation to the party's national convention.

Prior to recent European events, we would have favored instructing the Virginia delegates for Senator Harry Flood Byrd. It would have been in the nature of a "favorite son" gesture, because we concede that 1940 is not the year for the talented and able Senator to receive Democracy's nomination.

However, in the light of recent foreign developments, we feel that wise procedure at the Roanoke convention would be send an uninstructed delegation to the national convention. There are several advantages to such a course. It is now evident that the party will renominate President if he decides to accept the call for a third term. It would be futile and a political mistake to instruct the Virginia delegation against the re-nomination of the President. At the same time it would be a mistake to instruct the delegates for any other potential nominee in the absence of a statement from the President. The obvious fact is that the Democratic party must bid for a return to power on the basis of its record of the past seven years. For that reason the nominee must be either Roosevelt or someone closely associated with the incumbent administration. In fact, we feel that there are only two names to be considered . . . Roosevelt and Hull. The party can win with either as the standard-bearer.

The Virginia delegation should be free to support either of these and recognize that the world situation makes this Presidential election of 1940 vastly different from elections in normal times.

The Presidential nomination this year is more than a political prize. The next President may have to lead a mighty struggle to defend the very life of the nation and even of the free peoples of the world. The delegates to the national convention must ignore the tactics of ordinary political procedure. For the grave months ahead, the first choice of the American people is the leadership of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, and the second choice is Cordell Hull. The decision between these two will be made, not by the national convention but by the President. In normal times we may or may not have wanted it that way; but these are not normal times, and that is the way it is. There is every reason, therefore, for the Stats convention to endorse Democracy's choice 1931 and send an uninstructed delegation to the national convention.

TRUMPS IN THE WAR GAME

(From Peninsula Enterprise)

Wars and battlefields are a horrible experiment station in which new theories of war making are tried out. Among the new theories two are specially prominent.

One is the idea that power in the air is superior to naval power, that airships can defeat warships. Up to date, that theory does not look so good. The German air forces have sunk a number of British warships, but not enough to seriously affect the fate of the war.

The question also comes up whether mechanized and motorized equipment, or fortifications, are the more valuable in defending a country. The French put a heavy dependance on fortifications. At vast expense and with amazing thoroughness, they built the famed Maginot line. It is a wilderness of concrete fortifications, underground shelters, barbed wire and machine gun nests. It seemed impregnable.

Yet the Germans have been running over a good part of France in spite of the Maginot line. That line was not finished in equal strength over the entire French frontier. An extension of it was built from the end of the Maginot line to the sea, but the extension seems to have been relatively weak, and anyway it ailed to hold back the Nazi hordes.

The German motorized equipment seems the most amazing manifestation of this war. So far nothing has stood against it. It dashes across the country in huge leaps, carrying death and destruction many miles in a day, where in the World War the slow progress was measured only by feet and yards.

Whether the heavy fortifications of the Maginot line would have held if they had been extended to the sea, is an unsettled question.

Motor equipment and airplanes appear to be the aces of this year's wicked and cruel game of war.

ITALY AND THE WAR

If there is every reason for Italy to stay out of the war in Europe, yet ere these words are read Italy may be in the thick of the fight. Feeling against Mussolini has mounted in this country and he has lost the respect he once enjoyed, in spite of the fact that the problems posed for him have been most difficult.

Rome lies bestride all the warring cross-currents of European power politics. Mussolini has been pulled in three directions: by each side in the war and by the natural desires of his people for peace. It has been hard to balance on the eight-rope. Yet, the preponderance of evidence has been in favor of staying out of the war. Let's list some of the arguments for Italian neutrality:

First, his people want peace. No ruler, be he king, president or dictator can lastly ignore the wishes of the masses of the people of his country. There is no mistaking that the great bulk of responsible people in Italy pray for peace. The firebrands demanding war are the malcontents, the radicals and the misfits who would hope to profit in the revolution Italy would undergo after a war. Mussolini knows his people and knows . . . every dictator keeps close to the public pulse through intelligence officers. If he goes to war it will be over the silent protest of the people of Italy.

Second, every power possessed by the Catholic church in Italy, has been exerted for peace. The Pope abhors Nazism, the sympathies of the Catholic church are with the democracies. The Catholic church is the greatest force in Italy and if Mussolini goes to war, he will do so in full knowledge that the church does not approve and that he will be compelled to subdue the hold the church has on the Italian people . . . and that's no easy task.

Third, if Italy fights, she will have to bear the brunt of Allied attack. She will be bottled up in the Mediterranean Sea. All access to the world will be denied her. She will have to fight on her own bread basket. She will be cut off from Spain, from America, from her colonies in Africa. True, she will have access to the Balkans and Germany. But every indication is that the Balkans will face a famine of their own this winter and it is unlikely that Germany will have exportable surpluses. And no nation in Europe is so vulnerable to attack as Italy. She has great open coastlines to defend, and the funnel-shaped passes on the France-Italian border make an Italian attack on France most difficult, as a French advance down the valleys would be relatively easy.

What argument, then can overcome these factor in the scales of Il Duce's reasoning, and cause him to go to war? There can be only one: that he believes Germany will win the war quickly and that he can get a cut of the rich spoils if he gets in on "the kill." Passing over the repugnant ethics of such a viewpoint, there is grave doubt if there is any likelihood that a victorious Germany would share the "spoils" with Italy. Upon what would Mussolini base his faith in the promise of Germany to share the loot. What has been the fate of those who have placed faith in the promises of Germany's spoken or written word? Is there any soundness in theorizing that a victorious Germany would share the throne in Europe with a partner? Does Mussolini think Germany would really let Italy have Gibraltar, Malta or anything else of value commensurate with the loss of the pre-war balance of power? Is there, it may be added, true wisdom in the argument that somebody with a restraining hand should be on the winning side? If Italy yields to the command of Germany now and goes to war, is that not but a portend that Italy shall henceforth do just as Germany says . . . yield to the whip in the hand of her master!

If Mussolini fights, he must take the consequences, and forever bear a new name in history . . . not the proud name of IL DUCE, no, nor the exalted encomiums of history for his matchless feats in building up the prestige and glory of the Italian people . . . no, none of these, he will instead bear the most contemptible name in history . . . JUDAS!

The pages of history will teem with abhorrence wherever his name is recorded and the he will bring disrepute upon the fair name of a glorious people.

We once made a study of Italian history. It contains many wonderful names . . . Cavour, Garibaldi and we have added Mussolini. But, think well, Il Duce, think well!

Of all the names of history, only those are great who fought for civilization and human freedom. There are other names in history . . . Judas for example, but who wants to share a scaffold with Judas?

Vegetable Laxative Makes Happy Friends

Here's a laxative that usually acts thoroughly as laxatives must but is a gentle persuader for intestines when used this way: A quarter to a half-teaspoonful of spicy, aromatic BLACK-DRAUGHT on your tongue tonight; a drink of water. There's usually time for a good night's rest, with a gentle, thorough action next morning relieving constipation's headaches, billousness, sour stomach, bad breath.

BLACK-DRAUGHT is a splendid combination of vegetable ingredients, chief of which is an "intestinal tonic-laxative" that helps impart tone to lazy bowel muscles. It's economical. 25 to 40 doses: 25c.

EZEKIEL TEACHES PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY

LESSON TEXT—Ezekiel 33:7-16.
GOLDEN TEXT—But then every one of us shall give account of himself to God.—Romans 14:12.

Personal responsibility is a subject well worthy of careful and repeated consideration. We talk so much about social, national or racial responsibility that we are prone to forget that the social order, nations and races are made up of individuals. The Bible, while recognizing the relationship and responsibilities of nations and social groups to God, rightly stresses individual responsibility. Man is made in the likeness and image of God. He is the one who has fallen into sin, and he needs the regenerating grace of God in the Lord Jesus Christ. It is man who stands responsible to God, both as an individual and as God's representative in carrying His message to others.

I. Man's Responsibility for the Lives of Others (vv. 7-11).

Ezekiel had the official responsibility of a watchman sent by God to his own people in their captivity in Babylon. His was a special calling, and yet it is not true that, according to the teaching of the New Testament, every Christian is called to be a witness, a winner of souls, and a watchman?

1. The Watchman's Commission (v. 7). His appointment is by God, and the warning words he is to speak are given to him by God. Every true preacher and teacher of the gospel should be a God-called man, presenting the Word of God. Otherwise, his ministry will have little meaning and no real power. The same is true of every Christian: a personal touch with God must precede his efforts to win others to God.

2. The Watchman's Responsibility (vv. 8, 9). Being a watchman is not a duty that one bears lightly, for it has grave responsibilities. Lives are dependent on the vigilance and faithfulness of the watchman. Even those who watch over worldly goods or who guard the safety and comfort of others are held by us to a high measure of responsibility and are liable for misfeasance or carelessness in office. What about those of us to whom the destiny of eternal souls has been committed? Read the solemn words of verses 8 and 9.

3. The Watchman's Message (vv. 10, 11). The Jews who were in captivity because of their sin and failure were despondent. They saw no ray of hope; they were under the overwhelming burden of their sin. The message of God's watchman was one of hope to the repentant people. God is gracious toward the sinner and has no pleasure in punishing him. "Why will ye die?" places the responsibility squarely where it belongs—on the sinner himself.

II. Man's Responsibility for His Own Life (vv. 12-16).

Whatever may be our responsibility for the lives of others, certain it is that we must each one answer to God for our own lives. Ours is the glorious opportunity of living our life—and ours is the responsibility for it.

1. Consistent Living Required (v. 12). This verse evidently does not mean that a righteous man cannot be taken in a moment of defeat is lost. It rather refers to the one who has made an outward show of being righteous. Confident of himself, he has then fallen into careless living and all at once his true character is revealed in outright wickedness. So that man cannot then point to his past record as though it were a bank account to be used to justify him in his hour of failure. Righteousness is a matter of the heart. It is not outward rebirth, expressing itself in changed conduct and consistent living, not only yesterday and today, but also tomorrow.

2. Real Repentance Accepted (vv. 13-16). God was ready in Ezekiel's day to accept the genuinely repentant man and woman. Infinitely more precious and warm is the welcome that Christ now gives to sinners who turn to Him, for He, our blessed Lord, has now worked out the way of salvation on Calvary's tree.

'In' Not 'For'

Am I to thank God for everything? Am I to thank Him for bereavement, for pain, for poverty, for toil? . . . Be still my soul; thou hast misread the message. It is not to give thanks for everything, but to give thanks in everything.—Dr. G. Matheson.

They Shall Return to the Lord

And the Lord shall smite Egypt; he shall smite and heal it; and they shall return even to the Lord, and he shall be entreated of them, and shall heal them.—Isaiah 19:22.

Selfishness

What makes selfishness such a deadly sin is that it is such a self-deceiving one.

MRS MARY W CARDWELL
